It was 1991, I was 10 years old. But we survived the cyclone and sailed on down the west coast of Australia, down along the Great Australian Bight and into Port Melbourne for repairs on the ship. When we got to Melbourne, the ship was raided by customs officials who found that the ship didn't comply with standard safety regulations. We had no fire hoses or emergency alarms and the shipping company was fined. After that, I believe all Peruvian ships were banned from Australian ports unless they complied with the regulations.

PACKAGE PRICE: $250 Sample Type: In life and death story + design cover Title: The Quiet Achiever: Keith Poulter's life story Original documents: Short life story + two eulogies + newspaper story		Word count: 3,099 Pages: 20 Photos: 14 Booklet: A5 Inclusions: 5 printed booklets, A5 document wallet and postage Australia wide	 EULOGY BY DAUGHTER JULIE POULTER Keith Poulter was a man with a dream. A dream to live on the land. That dream became a reality in 1982 when he and his family moved into a three-bedroom brick house on the property they had purchased. The property was named 'Sharnook' in honour of the fish ancestor Keith had. Even though he was born in Australia and was proud to be an Aussie, he was prouder still of the fact his forefathers had come from Ireland. When an investigation into the family tree revealed that he was only one-third Irish and the rest English, he refused to acknowledge this and still insisted he was Irish through and through. And so it was that he got his 'Sharnook', a little bit of Ireland right here in Australia. He went out and bought a whole range of farm animals: cows, pigs, chickens, sheep and the odd dog and cat and they all lived in harmony together. It was like Noah's Ark. Then he slowly gathered all the farm boy's toys: a tractor, a ute, a motorbike, a plough and also built his very own truck complete with a water tank in case of bushfires. And when he got bored playing with the farm toys, he turned his creative hand to making unusual memorabilia. First came what some called 'Sharnokeggs', a large hockey-concrete-waterfall-come-pond thing, complete with stone steps and water spouting concrete fish! And a set of stone seats and tables for guests to sit at, to admire his creation. Next came the 'Shed'. Built like an aircraft hanger and completed inside with empty vintage beer cans and bottles, a dart board, a pool table, a jukebox, a bar and a table. It was an entertainment complex and mini pub rolled into one. And finally came the fishing pier over the dam that he was working on at the time of his death.

Adventure is my middle name, at least on the occasion! I, our Aunt was bogged in the Tongan forest as we all had to get out before the sunsets. You can see the chimney on a nearby taken tree to get a better view of the forest! Monday, 11th June We got up at 4:30am, had breakfast and left the Hobartway just after dawn to go to the Sun airport. Monash, Kay and I went in the first trip and spoke to the rep when we got there. Had her we had seven passengers wanting to go to the mainland and the said that was fine. And we just had to pay for excess baggage. After the first flight left at 5:00am or so, we got our tickets $580 apiece and got our luggage weighed. We also had to get on the scales to be weighed, which was a bit embarrassing! We were 26 kilos over our total allowance for seven people so we had to pay 22 per kilo for 106 kilos of luggage in total. The flight left about 10:30am and took exactly 8 minutes and was very smooth; one of the best flights I've had, surprisingly!
